

THE 10-MINUTE LUNCH-BREAK RESET

No changing clothes. No equipment.
Just ten minutes to feel like yourself again.

This full-body reset is designed for the middle of a busy day. Clear a small amount of space beside your desk, kitchen counter, or dining table and get moving.

THE FORMAT

Complete each movement for:

40
SEC

40 seconds of movement

20
SEC

20 seconds of rest

Complete the full circuit twice.

THE WORKOUT

1. Squat to Reach

Sit your hips back as though you are lowering onto a chair. Stand tall and reach both arms overhead.

Form cue: Keep your chest lifted and press through your whole foot as you stand.

Make it easier: Sit down onto a chair and stand back up. Reach only as high as your shoulders comfortably allow.

2. Desk or Counter Push-Ups

Place your hands on a sturdy desk or counter. Walk your feet back, bend your elbows, and lower your chest toward the surface.

Form cue: Keep your body in one long line and bring your chest toward your hands.

Make it easier: Use a wall instead of a desk or counter.

3. Reverse Lunges

Step one foot behind you and gently lower your back knee toward the floor. Return to standing and switch sides.

Form cue: Keep most of your weight through the front foot.

Make it easier: Hold the desk or counter for balance, or replace the lunges with alternating backward toe taps.

4. Standing Knee Drives

Stand tall and bring one knee toward your chest. Lower it and switch sides.

Form cue: Brace your stomach gently and avoid leaning backward.

Make it easier: Hold a chair or wall and move slowly.

5. Plank or Wall Plank

Place your hands beneath your shoulders and hold your body in a strong, straight position.

Form cue: Gently tighten your stomach and squeeze your glutes.

Make it easier: Place your hands on a wall, desk, or counter.

CONNECTION MOMENT

Before returning to your day, take one slow breath and ask yourself:

What would make the rest of today feel a little easier?
